

Mindfulness Based Relapse Prevention Program (MBRP)

Mindfulness-Based Relapse Prevention is a mind-body approach merging clinically-proven interventions from G. Alan Marlatt's Relapse Prevention Therapy and Jon Kabat-Zinn's Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction program, created specifically for people recovering from substance abuse and addiction.

During this program you will learn and practice mindfulness meditation, mindful movement, along with cognitive-behavioral strategies to maintain and reinforce sobriety. Participants will be expected to do daily home practice throughout the eight weeks. Participants will receive an audio CD for home practice.

This MBRP program for those who have had at least 30 days of active sobriety.

Why use a mind/body approach for relapse prevention?

- Mind-body approaches recognize our innate healing abilities
- Illness provides some people with an opportunity for personal growth and transformation
- Mindfulness meditation, yoga/mindful movement (also, chi gong) address lifestyle imbalances while deepening and strengthening overall global coping strategies

What is Relapse Prevention Therapy (RPT)?

- A cognitive-behavioral approach which assumes addictive behaviors are learned behaviors
- RPT focuses upon the following interventions
 - Awareness of triggers for addictive behaviors such as urges, cravings, interpersonal conflict, social pressure, and negative emotional states
 - Cognitive-behavioral skills training for successful change in thoughts, feelings, and behavior

Mindfulness ...

- Develops a spacious awareness of the present moment
- Develops a curious, non-judgmental, acceptance of whatever one is experiencing moment to moment
- Develops an awareness of the transient nature of internal experience and allows us to release the need to control what comes next
- Being with the moment frees us from rigid attitudes, cognitions, behaviors, and lowers reactivity
- Cultivates letting go of desired outcome to more easily tolerate pain without the need to avoid or fix it.

Anonymous Testimonials:

“My impulsiveness is my biggest trigger for using substances. MBRP tools have changed my impulsiveness greatly and I handle stressful situations better. I will use practices I learned in MBRP in the future to ultimately overcome my urges and cravings.”

“It is valuable to have awareness!” I have been thinking before acting and have been able to notice situations that could turn bad.”

“I started to stop and think about what I’m doing more and I’m more aware of my surroundings. I really enjoyed the meditations and am happy that I have a home practice CD to continue.”

“Meditation has helped relieve stress and I sleep better. Learning about mind states, sleep benefits and stages of sleep was really interesting and valuable.”

“Most valuable to me was the fact that I learned techniques to learn how to realize and use self-control! I am more aware of even the simplest of activities and the sensations experienced.”

“I learned how to sit still and become aware of myself, my surroundings and my responses to all situations. I have learned to stop and slow down my impulsive reactions, words and actions.”

“I learned how to stay calm in difficult situations. This holistic approach helps the mind, body and spirit grow.”

“I’m more aware! I feel more at peace with myself and how I deal with others.”

“Mary was an excellent and open instructor. She put me at ease, where I was able to explore ideas and talk openly about my fears.” “Mary, thank you for helping others. The passion you have shows.”

“I have struggled with anger issues for years and this has given me the chance to not be so critical.”

“My addiction was on automatic pilot. I’ve learned I can actually stop a trigger in the middle of its movement.”
